Chicago Theological Seminary names new Chapel Coordinator

CHICAGO – August 27, 2018 – Chicago Theological Seminary is pleased to announce the appointment of Rev. Jasmin Taylor as chapel coordinator for the 2018-2019 academic year. Taylor will be responsible for organizing the weekly chapel experiences and special event convocations for the seminary. She will begin her duties on September 1, 2018.

In addition to her duties at CTS, Taylor serves as associate pastor of digital and media ministries at Trinity United Church of Christ, where she works closely with the church's media department to coordinate media needs for worship experiences. Taylor also served as Trinity's Freedom School project director, where she was responsible for site coordinators, interns, hiring and management of staff, and designed parent workshops and other parental involvement initiatives.

"We are delighted Rev. Taylor will re-join the CTS community," President Stephen G. Ray Jr., said. "I'm very impressed with her presence, skills, and integrative thinking she demonstrates. Combined with Rev. Taylor's knowledge of CTS, these will enable her to help us explore new and vital ways to deliver the chapel experience for our rapidly changing community."

Taylor received her master of divinity degree from CTS in 2010 and her bachelor's degree in organizational behavioral studies from Northwestern University in 2000.
